Title: Leveraging Lived Experience: Supervision in the Wild: Strategies for High Quality and Affirming Supervision Across Contexts

Type: General Presentation

Content Area:

Teaching/Training/Supervision (TTS)

Abstract: Applied behavior analytic services are increasingly expanding into home- and community-based settings (Dennison et al., 2019; Silbaugh & El Fattal, 2021). Similarly, supervision is increasingly occurring outside traditional center-based settings. Board certified and licensed behavior analysts are now providing remote, hybrid, and in-person supervision across diverse contexts (Gingles, 2022; Simmons et al., 2021), including client’s homes, schools, and other community environments. This presentation examines supervision “in the wild”, discussing the benefits – including equitable and flexible access to services – and challenges – including burnout (e.g., Nastasi et al., 2024; Plantiveau et al., 2022) and lack of support and resources (Bayley et al., 2023; Colón et al., 2024; Hajiaghamseni et al., 2021), that evolving supervision models oftentimes face. This presentation also provides guidance to (a) ensure that nontraditional supervision promotes neurodiversity-affirming practice and that affirming, culturally responsive, and respectful approaches are maintained across different service and supervision formats; (b) ensure quality and engagement in nontraditional supervision contexts; (c) recommend creative solutions to common problems faced in nontraditional contexts, especially those essential to quality service delivery, such as data collection, interobserver agreement, and procedural integrity; and (d) leverage tools that help manage competing environmental contingencies and other barriers to supervision in flexible settings.

General Presentation Information

Presentations will be scheduled to occur on Thursday or Friday of the conference. They will be one hour in duration.

By completing this submission, I acknowledge the following: I acknowledge that the information provided within this form is accurate. I can confirm that I hold an active BCBA certification OR have a doctorate and substantial formal training in Behavior Analysis OR am a current graduate student who has completed a master's degree and is enrolled in a behavior-analytic doctoral program. I understand that the presentation described here must be executed in a manner that is consistent with the description outlined here, as well as with ACE Provider Requirements. To view the BACB ACE Provider handbook, click HERE. I understand that a CE event may address any aspect of Behavior Analysis, including the practice, science, methodology, theory, or profession itself. I recognize that, while some review of BACB task list content may be necessary, the content of my presentation must go beyond information included within the task list. Additionally, I understand that my presentation must be behavior-analytic in nature, be appropriate for attendees with a behavior-analytic background, and reflect content/information that is current and accurate. I understand that a CE event counting toward Ethics credit must cover ethical issues in behavior-analytic practice or research and should relate to the BACB's ethics requirements/standards. I understand that a CE event counting toward supervision credit must be behavior-analytic in nature and cover effective supervision as described by the BACB. I am aware that I may request a supplemental document summarizing my facilitation of this event (Teaching CE), if following the facilitation of the CE event described here, I recognize that the event was not consistent with the current description or a complaint has been made to me, I agree to alert the ACE coordinator for NYSABA immediately.

Abstract

Applied behavior analytic services are increasingly expanding into home- and community-based settings (Dennison et al., 2019; Silbaugh & El Fattal, 2021). Similarly, supervision is increasingly occurring outside traditional center-based settings. Board certified and licensed behavior analysts are now providing remote, hybrid, and in-person supervision across diverse contexts (Gingles, 2022; Simmons et al., 2021), including client’s homes, schools, and other community environments. This presentation examines supervision “in the wild”, discussing the benefits – including equitable and flexible access to services – and challenges – including burnout (e.g., Nastasi et al., 2024; Plantiveau et al., 2022) and lack of support and resources (Bayley et al., 2023; Colón et al., 2024; Hajiaghamseni et al., 2021), that evolving supervision models oftentimes face. This presentation also provides guidance to (a) ensure that nontraditional supervision promotes neurodiversity-affirming practice and that affirming, culturally responsive, and respectful approaches are maintained across different service and supervision formats; (b) ensure quality and engagement in nontraditional supervision contexts; (c) recommend creative solutions to common problems faced in nontraditional contexts, especially those essential to quality service delivery, such as data collection, interobserver agreement, and procedural integrity; and (d) leverage tools that help manage competing environmental contingencies and other barriers to supervision in flexible settings.

Learning Objective 1

Attendees will evaluate the benefits and challenges of providing behavior analytic supervision across remote, hybrid, and in-person models within home- and community-based settings.

Learning Objective 2

Attendees will identify three supervision strategies that promote neurodiversity-affirming, culturally responsive, and respectful approaches across different service and supervision formats.

Learning Objective 3

Attendees will identify three strategies to support quality, engagement, and accountability in nontraditional supervision formats, and will evaluate environmental and systemic barriers that may impact effective supervision outside traditional center-based settings and consider tools to mitigate their effects.

Do you have supporting data?

No

Please give a reason for not having data.

The proposed presentation is based on (a) current peer-reviewed literature on supervision practices across remote, hybrid, and community-based contexts; and (b) the presenters’ professional experience providing and overseeing behavior analytic supervision in diverse, nontraditional settings.

Which of the following is true about ABA services:

- a. ABA services are increasingly expanding into homes and community settings – Correct answer
- b. ABA services are increasingly occurring within center-based programs
- c. ABA supervision should not take place remotely
- d. ABA supervision cannot cater to the individualized needs of the supervisee, supervisor, or client

All of these are barriers/concerns that might affect supervision, EXCEPT:

- e. Inconsistency in amount of time spent with supervisee

- f. Large caseloads that affect quality of supervision
- g. Availability of remote or hybrid options for supervision – Correct answer
- h. Personal attributes of supervisor and/or supervisee

¹³ Please provide 3-5 CEU assessment questions (each with answer options and the correct answer) for the attendee assessment. Quiz questions will be used to allow asynchronous attendees to earn their CEU certificates from recorded presentations and/or address CEU issues that may arise during the conference. For poster submissions, please mark not applicable (N/A). Kindly note that presenters may contact us to request revisions to their questions as the conference approaches, since many abstracts are submitted before presentations are finalized. All quiz questions are required by Monday, October 26, 2026. *
